Discriminatory Language/Actions

- an ejection (red card) will result.

If an epithet is reported to a referee by a player or team official:

- A meeting on the player's side of the field will take place.
- Coaches will be permitted to inform their team that any further incidents may result in an immediate ejection, a temporary suspension of the match, the match being abandoned and/or teams being removed from the competition. For a match that is not resumed, the score when the match was stopped will stand.

Discriminatory Language/Actions by Spectators

If an epithet by a Spectator is heard by or reported to a referee:

- The match will be stopped, and players directed to their benches.
- Both head coaches will be advised of what was heard/reported.
- Coaches will be requested to inform their spectators that any further incidents could result in a temporary suspension of the match, removal of all spectators from the match, the match being abandoned and/or teams being removed from the competition. For a match that is not resumed, the score when the match was stopped will stand.
- The head coach may ask their spectators to help identify any offending spectator(s).
- If the spectator is identified, they will be asked to leave. If they do not comply, security will intervene.
